Who is a Close Associate?

Section 3 of the Private Security Act 2004 provides a definition of a close associate in relation to a private security business licence.

- A close associate is a person who is able to exercise a significant influence over the running of the business because they-
- Hold an interest in the capital or assets of that business; or
- Are entitled (by law, equity or otherwise) to receive any income derived from that business; or
- Hold any power, either alone or in association with others, (by voting or otherwise) to participate in any managerial or executive decision of that business; or
- Hold any power, either alone or in association with others, to appoint any person to a position of management (ie director, manager, secretary or any other capacity) in the business.
- A person who participates in the management of the business is also classified as a close associate.
- The definition of a close associate does not extend to a shareholder of a public company or to an officer of the body corporate (if the holder of the licence is a body corporate).
- One example of a close associate to a business licence would be a person who has provided finances to start up a company but is not a director or officer of the company.
- It is a requirement of the Private Security Act 2004 that all close associates to the business be declared.
- All close associates must meet the probity requirements outlined in the Private Security Act 2004.
